

Bare Board Group is Supplier of the Year for National Instruments

Largo, FL -- May 7, 2009: Bare Board Group, Inc. (BBG), a supplier of quality printed circuit boards, has earned top honors as Supplier of the Year for National Instruments, an internationally known company with more than 5,000 employees. The award recognizes BBG as the supplier that consistently performs beyond expectations throughout the year, delivering world-class performance within NI's global supply chain. "With the rising standard to which global companies are being held," said Scott Christman, NI's global supply chain director, "National Instruments makes it a priority to work with suppliers who are dedicated to quality performance, timely delivery, a competitive cost structure and innovative business practices." BBG has demonstrated the commitment, innovation and results that set it apart from the rest of the industry, according to Christman, who congratulated BBG for its "outstanding accomplishments."

"The Supplier of the Year award highlights BBG's status as a world-class PCB distributor," said BBG President Greg Papandrew. "This recognition could not have been accomplished without the dedication of BBG personnel in our U.S. and Taiwan offices, as well as our outstanding vendors," Papandrew said. "It is a true team effort."

About the Bare Board Group:
